GTMO Welcomes New CSO

Capt. Les McCoy greets Cmdr. Ricky Holt as he arrives at Flag Landing Tuesday.

New NAVBASE Chief Staff Officer Arrives

CDR Ricky Holt and his family, Cathy, Travis and Daniel, arrived Tuesday to begin their tour at Naval Base Guantanamo Bay. The family arrived here in memorable fashion as their flight from Norfolk was delayed for an extended period at Naval Air Station Jacksonville and then circled numerous times as they waited for a thunderstorm to clear the area of their approach into Leeward, GTMO's unique weather patterns broke enough for the family to make the cross-bay trip to Windward without incident where they were treated to a night off to recuperate. Welcome aboard!

Right: GTMO-1 arrives at Flag Landing Tuesday with the Holt Family escorted by Capt. and Mrs. Mike Fair. About to come ashore is (l-r) Daniel, Travis, CDR and Cathy Holt.

Meet & Greet

Parents and children visited the W.T. Sampson Elementary and High School on Friday, August 22 for the annual Meet and Greet with teachers and staff.

This was the first opportunity for many parents to meet with their child's teacher and learn about what to expect during the 2003-04 school year.

A table was also set up and staffed by the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts of GTMO to register young boys for a challenging and rewarding experience in the scouts.

QOL Survey Results Rate Sailors' Satisfaction In Job, Personal Lives

By JO1 Teresa J. Frith

Chief of Naval Personnel Public Affairs

A Sailor's view of their quality of life plays an extremely important factor in determining whether they will choose to continue their military career. Recently, more than 5,000 Sailors expressed their views on quality of life in 15 areas during the 2002 Quality of Life Survey.

The survey, administered by the Navy Personnel Command's (NPC) Navy Personnel Research and Development Center (NPRDC), was sent to 17,000 randomly selected Sailors. Approximately one-third responded with their inputs. The survey addressed quality of life in four professional areas: shipboard life, career development, current job and Sailor preparedness, as well as 11 personal areas including leisure and recreation, friends and other personal relationships, and standard of living/income levels.

According to the survey results, Sailors seem positive about their overall quality of life, with 63 percent saying they were satisfied with the military way of life, and 84 percent satisfied with their life in general.

However, when asked about their feelings on their professional domains, including shipboard life, current job, preparedness and career development, the satisfaction level varied, with the junior enlisted ranks being less satisfied than chief petty officer and officer ranks.

Overall, only 41 percent rated shipboard life as satisfactory. For example, Sailors in the E2-E-6 range weren't as happy with their berthing space sizes as were the chiefs and officers.

Sailors in all ranks were more positive on the areas of current job, career development and preparedness, with overall marks of 67 percent for E1 - E6, 70 percent for chiefs and 79 percent for officers. The only exception was that less than half of the enlisted were satisfied with the amount of time they had to update their skills.

Similar finds were shown in the areas of standard of living/income, with the majority of E-2 through E-6 being dissatisfied with their income levels, stressing the need for more money for extras and saving, while CPOs and officers were generally satisfied with their income levels.

There was a similar trend in comparing non-career Sailors with less than 10 years of service to those of career Sailors with more than 10 years service. The survey showed that a sizeable number of non-careerists were happy with their career development and current job, but dissatisfied with shipboard life.

Thanks to these results, the Navy has concluded that improving shipboard life, especially for junior Sailors, is a way to improve overall quality of life and retention. The results of the survey have been forwarded to appropriate commands to determine how best to do this, including the possibility of things such as improving future ship designs to improve habitability issues, and accelerating construction of off-ship housing for single junior Sailors.

In the areas of job and career development, there are a number of initiatives underway to continue to raise satisfaction levels, such as mentoring, Sea Warrior and Covenant Leadership.

For more information on these initiatives, contact the NPC Customer Service Center at 1-866-U-ASK-NPC or visit them on the web at www.staynavy.navy.mil.

Claiming he wasn't really surprised, Capt. Mike Fair began celebrating his last birthday in Guantanamo Bay at the weekly Department Head meeting at Bulkeley Hall. The meeting began with a hearty rendition of Happy Birthday and a short address by the Capt. (who even admitted that the references to his 51st birthday were off by just one as he actually turned 52).

Immediately following the meeting, everyone enjoyed some birthday refreshments.

Capt. Fair departs Guantanamo Bay in September for his new position in Washington with BRAC (orders pending).

School Hours, Nutrition, Childcare Discussed at Special SAC Meeting

Do you know what SAC is and who your local representatives are? SAC stands for School Advisory Committee. These representatives are tasked with advising the W.T. Sampson school principal, Sandra DiQuinzio, about all school related matters, including budget execution, curriculum, policies, and support functions. There are three locally elected parents and three teachers on the Guantanamo Bay SAC.

The committee members are Julie Barnette, Charles Jenkins and Tony Stinson, who serves as the committee president. Shirley Baggett and Tina Lake represent the teachers. Currently, there is one teacher chair not filled. Each person fills their position for a two-year term, and elections are held as a chair becomes vacant. There are four meetings per year advertised on the roller and on Open Line. At this time minutes are not publicly posted.

Decisions made at the meetings are based on the concerns at that time. All parents are invited and encouraged to attend the SAC meetings.

Recently, an emergency SAC session was called to discuss the shortening of the school day. In an effort to alleviate concerns brought to the SAC in regards to disputes on the playground, it was determined that shortening the lunch period and recess would address the issues. As the school year approached this new schedule was published and several parents voiced concerns about what appeared to be a severely reduced school day. The school principal reassured parents that instructional time has not been affected by the change in hours, and W.T. Sampson was meeting the minimum standard of instruction as mandated by the DoD - 5 and ½ hours, exclusive of lunch time and recess.

Many parents at the meeting expressed concern that "something is being taken from our children, and we want to get it back." SAC members stated that, "it is a staffing and resource issue; that it has been a challenge in the past to get volunteers", to work as lunch and play ground monitors.

There was a great deal of concern over the shortened lunch hour and how that will affect our children's nutritional habits as well as their ability to function competently throughout their school day. Lt Ken Arlinghaus, the hospital dietician, offered volumes of research in support of a minimum 20-minute seated eating period. Further research offered expounded on the benefits of proper nutrition habits and educational aptitude, as well as research that supported a pre-lunch recess versus a post-lunch recess period.

The final outcome of the meeting was that the decision to shorten the school day would stand, however, implementation would be delayed for two weeks so that a proper vote can be taken.

Furthermore Craig Basil of MWR eased many concerns by guaranteeing that childcare fees would not increase.

After much discussion, it became obvious that the root of the debate laid in a breakdown of communication. If more parents knew what the SAC was and why it's important, and if agendas had been posted and better advertisement been offered, perhaps a more representative vote could have been collected prior to the decision to make changes. It is important to be pro-active in your child's education and to know who has influence over how they receive that education. It is also important for those institutions to make themselves known and accessible.

The base's commanding officer, Capt. Les McCoy, attended the meeting and stressed the importance of the roller, Gazette, and radio as means of communication here in Guantanamo Bay.

Parents are strongly urged to watch, read, and listen for announcements concerning the SAC, Parent Teacher Organization (PTO) and other base advisory meetings so that they may attend and play an active role in determining their child's educational atmosphere.

For more information on the local SAC, contact the school at 3500. For more on nutrition, contact Lt. Arlinghaus at 7-2270.

Transitioning? 10 Ways to Find 20 Employers

From William Barber
Transition Manager,
FFSC Guantanamo Bay Cuba

It's all a numbers game. If you market yourself to 10 employers, you should land one interview. Statistically, you should expect a 9 to 10 percent success rate. By marketing to 20 employers, 10% would be two interviews. Less than 10, and your success rate will be zero. So, let's get started and become a success story.

Referrals - Talk to everyone you know; friends, family, relatives, neighbors, and others. Ask about employers hiring in the area or occupation. Referrals land 80% more jobs than any other resource.

Community Agencies - There are dozens of organizations within your community that exist to help individuals and provide information. Check government, job services, public libraries, Chamber of Commerce and city halls for any information or assistance.

The State Career Training Center (formerly "Job Service") - There is approximately 2000 state Career Training

Centers around the country. They are there for assistance in accessing the job market and often times provide employment assistance in the form of resume help, interviewing skills and others. The Department of Labor provides a counselor at each Career Training Center for veterans' assistance.

Newspaper Want Ads - Use the Help wanted Ads to spot employers that are hiring at the desired location. It also is an excellent way to find point of contact at the desired company. Use the ads to approach the company even if it's out of your career field.

Yellow Pages - Use this avenue to investigate local employers in the area. It will also be a useful tool to identify a cross sectional view of all businesses in the area.

Trade Journals - Every trade journal will have a help wanted section. Use this to identify who is hiring and where in the country.

State Indexes - State Indexes will identify businesses in certain fields like production, retail, service Industry and so on. Check the local library or Internet for these listings.

Local Businesses - Check the local Chamber of Commerce to identify local businesses.

The Internet - There are many job sites on the Internet now to assist with employment. Almost every business will have a web-site and allow applications over the Internet. Ensure you follow the applicable instructions at each Web-site as each one is different.

Temporary Agencies - Temp agencies are a good place to start especially if you cannot penetrate the local job market. More companies are using temp services these days, especially to fill, entry level positions because of the cost to hire an individual outright. Don't rule out these companies, they offer many benefits.

If you aren't sure or require more information, the local Fleet and Family Support Center is a good place to start. The specialists are willing and able to provide any type of assistance needed for you employment success. Our TAP class is scheduled for September 2-5, 2003. Call 4141 today or stop in and see how we can help.
